

The Negro Baseball Leagues

An American Legacy

Lecture presentation by filmmaker, author and performer Byron Motley

Thurs., Feb. 9, 7 p.m.
Theater Center, Daytona Beach Campus

Based on the upcoming television documentary,
"Oh, How They Lived - Stories of the Negro Baseball Leagues," this presentation features keynote speaker and filmmaker Byron Motley.

Motley's father, Bob Motley, grew up in America's segregated South, served as one of the country's first African-American marines and later became a referee in the Negro Baseball Leagues.

Motley grew up hearing his father's stories and has written a book and produced a documentary film that not only reflects the history of baseball in America, but the impact of the game in a segregated society.

This presentation promises to provide an insightful, educational and entertaining look at this important time in American history.
